

Ronald H. Craig:

Letter post marked.

May 25 1995

I go up for parole in June. The first lawyer John Noble said I would be out on parole after 3 years, plus Prosecutor Norris promised to send a letter recommending me out, so he is suppose to recommend me out again. I go up in June, and if I get flopped again, I'm not testifying against anyone. If the prosecutor goes by the plea bargain I'm suppose to be out. The prosecutor should tell the parole board to release me, then I could testify accordingly with no problem. I remember everything that happened. If I'm out I can testify. If I'm locked up I won't testify, because it will be in the News paper and I'm in a Minimum security prison where you can walk around easily, and I'm not getting stabbed. I could testify easily if I had a parole. I'm suppose to be out anyway, I have 3 1/2 years in. I know Tyrone won't plead guilty. I know something else Tyrone did. He robbed another [redacted] person in alliance.
